This is Cookie Dodo.

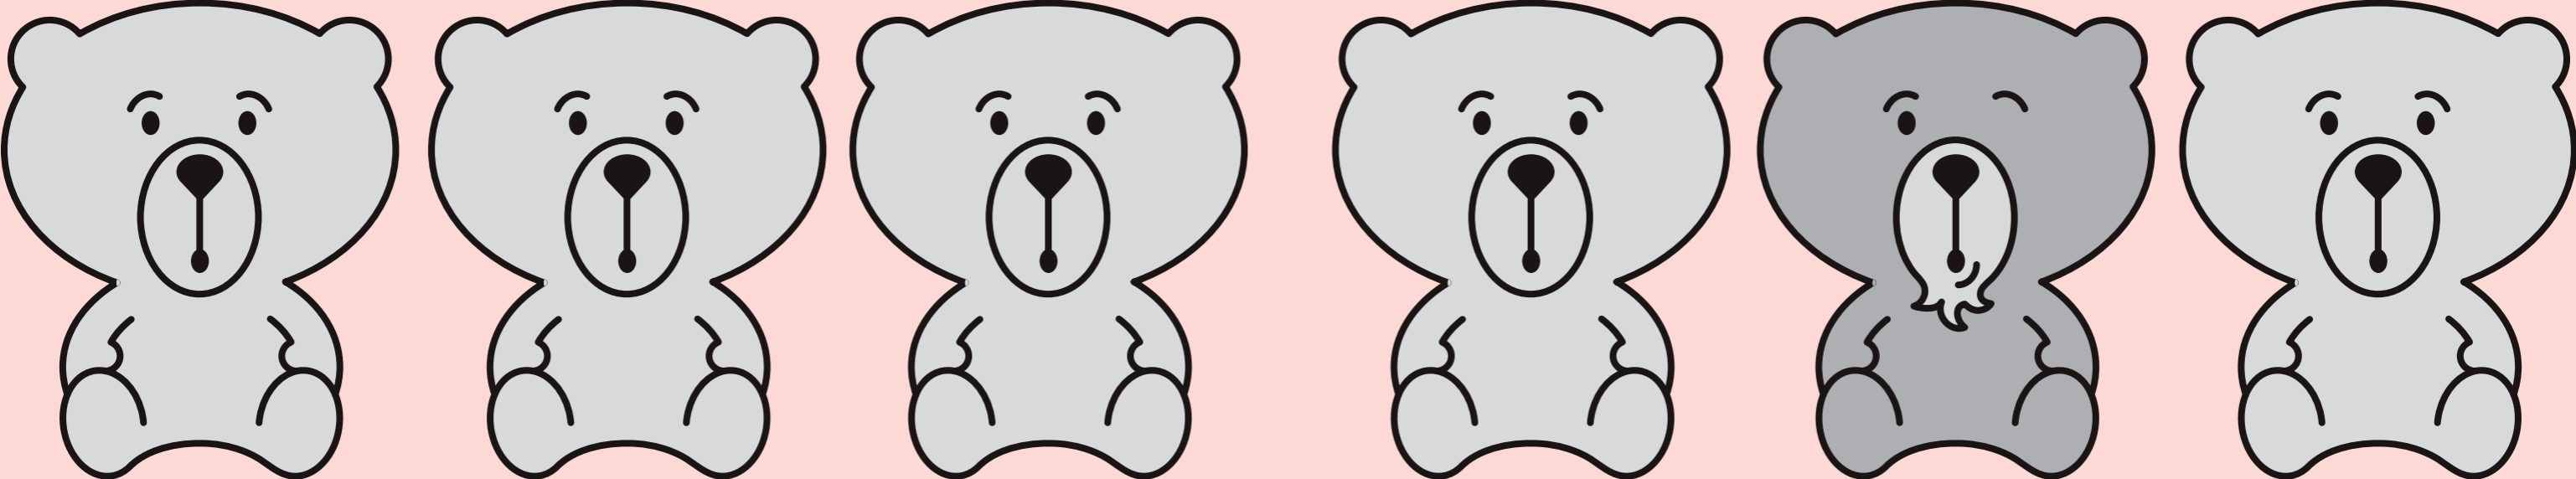

Dodo is a little teddy bear.
A cute little teddy bear.

With a cute little beard
and one cute little eye.
The other little eye
had to say goodbye.

Dodo lives with lots and lots

of little teddy bears

in teddy bear town.

A little teddy bear town.

A bright and tidy little teddy bear town.

In the bright and tidy little streets are bright and tidy little rows
of bright and tidy little houses with bright and tidy little windows.

Between the bright and tidy little houses
is one not-so-bright, not-so-tidy little house.
A rickety kind of house.
The roof is cracked and paint is scratched,
windows wrapped in spiderwebs.

That's where Dodo lives.
He loves being in his rickety little house.
That's where he bakes little crumb cookies.
Those are his favorite.

When the little teddy bears get together,
they always share

a hug.

They hug and hug and hug and hug.
And then they hug some more!

Because they're little teddy bears.

And that's what little teddy bears love to do.

But not Dodo.

Dodo doesn't hug.

And he doesn't get hugged either.

With Dodo, there's always something wrong.

Sometimes this, sometimes that.

He doesn't quite belong.

That's why he prefers to just stay home,

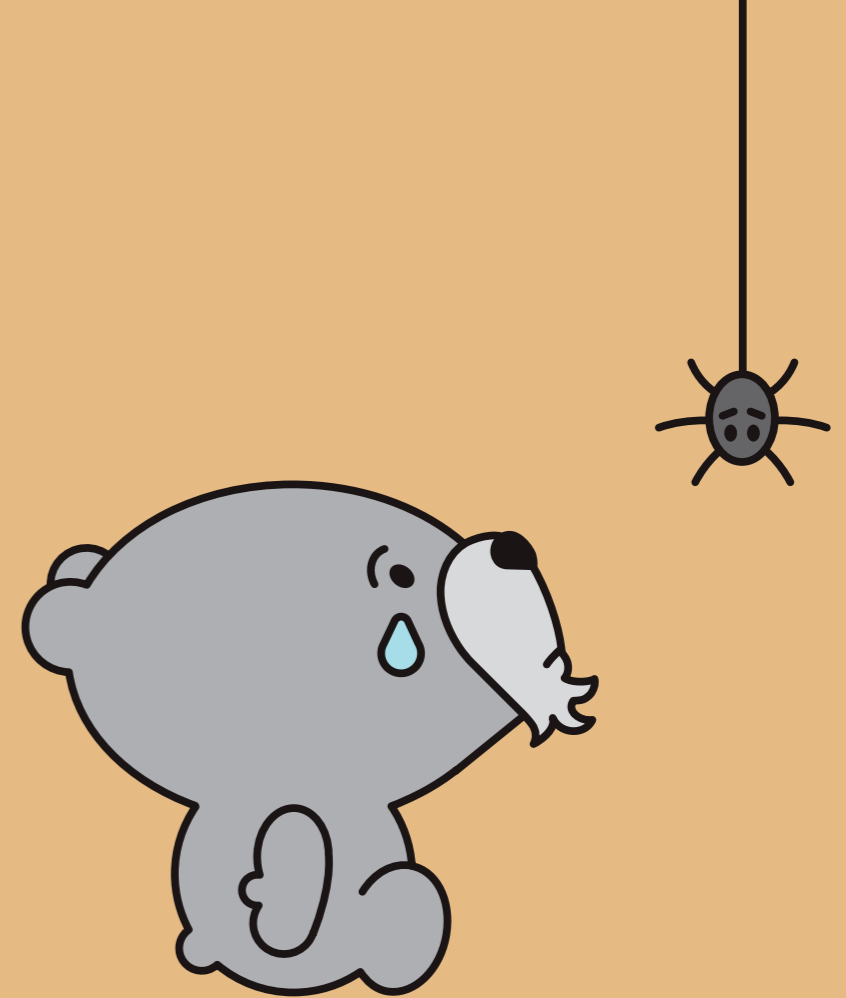

all alone in his rickety little house.

And it makes Dodo very sad.

“What’s wrong, Dodo?”
asks a spider who drops down
with a little frown.

“Nobody hugs me,” answers Dodo.

“I’m a bit tattered. And there’s always something wrong with me.”

“Don’t be sad, Dodo.

Even if you’re tattered,”
says the spider with a shrug,
“you can still share a hug!”
as he scurries back up.

Dodo sits quietly
and looks out the window.

Just like he always does.

He sees the other little teddy bears.

And suddenly,
he feels the urge to bake.

Crumb cookies.

So many crumb cookies to make!

Not for himself,

but for the others to share.

So he gets to work, full of care.

Dodo goes wild in his kitchen!

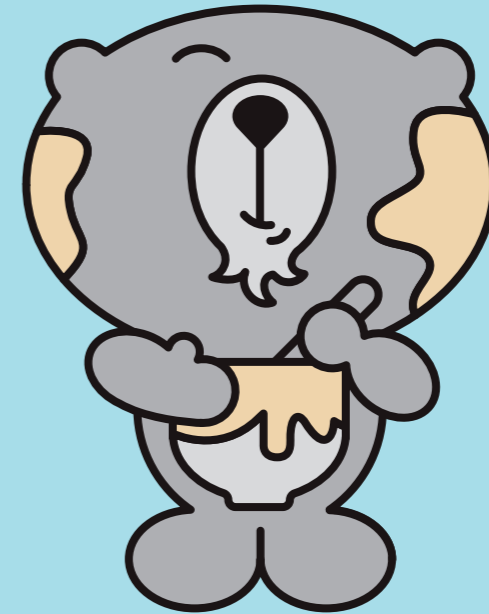

Batter is flying, oh what a mission!

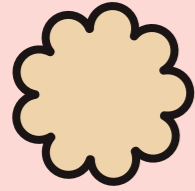

He tosses in cups and cups of sugar.

This will be yummy!

• The little teddy bears

are in for a sweet surprise!

He sets the little cookies on a huge platter
and runs outside with a happy chatter.
“I made cookies!” he announces with pride.

“And you can have as

you like!”

The little teddy bears feast away on Dodo’s yummy little crumb cookies today!

“Yummy!”

“Cookies? For us?

You’re the best, Dodo!”

cheer the little teddy bears with glee.

One of them runs over to Dodo and squeezes him with a big, happy hug.

Dodo hugs back, his heart warm and snug.

All the little bears rush to hug Dodo.

And Dodo hugs them all back!

They hug and hug and hug and hug.

And then they hug some more!

Because they're little teddy bears.

And that's what little teddy bears love to do.

Dodo hugs every day.

Together with all the little teddy bears.
From early in the morning
until late at night.

And after each hug, they eat
yummy little crumb cookies...

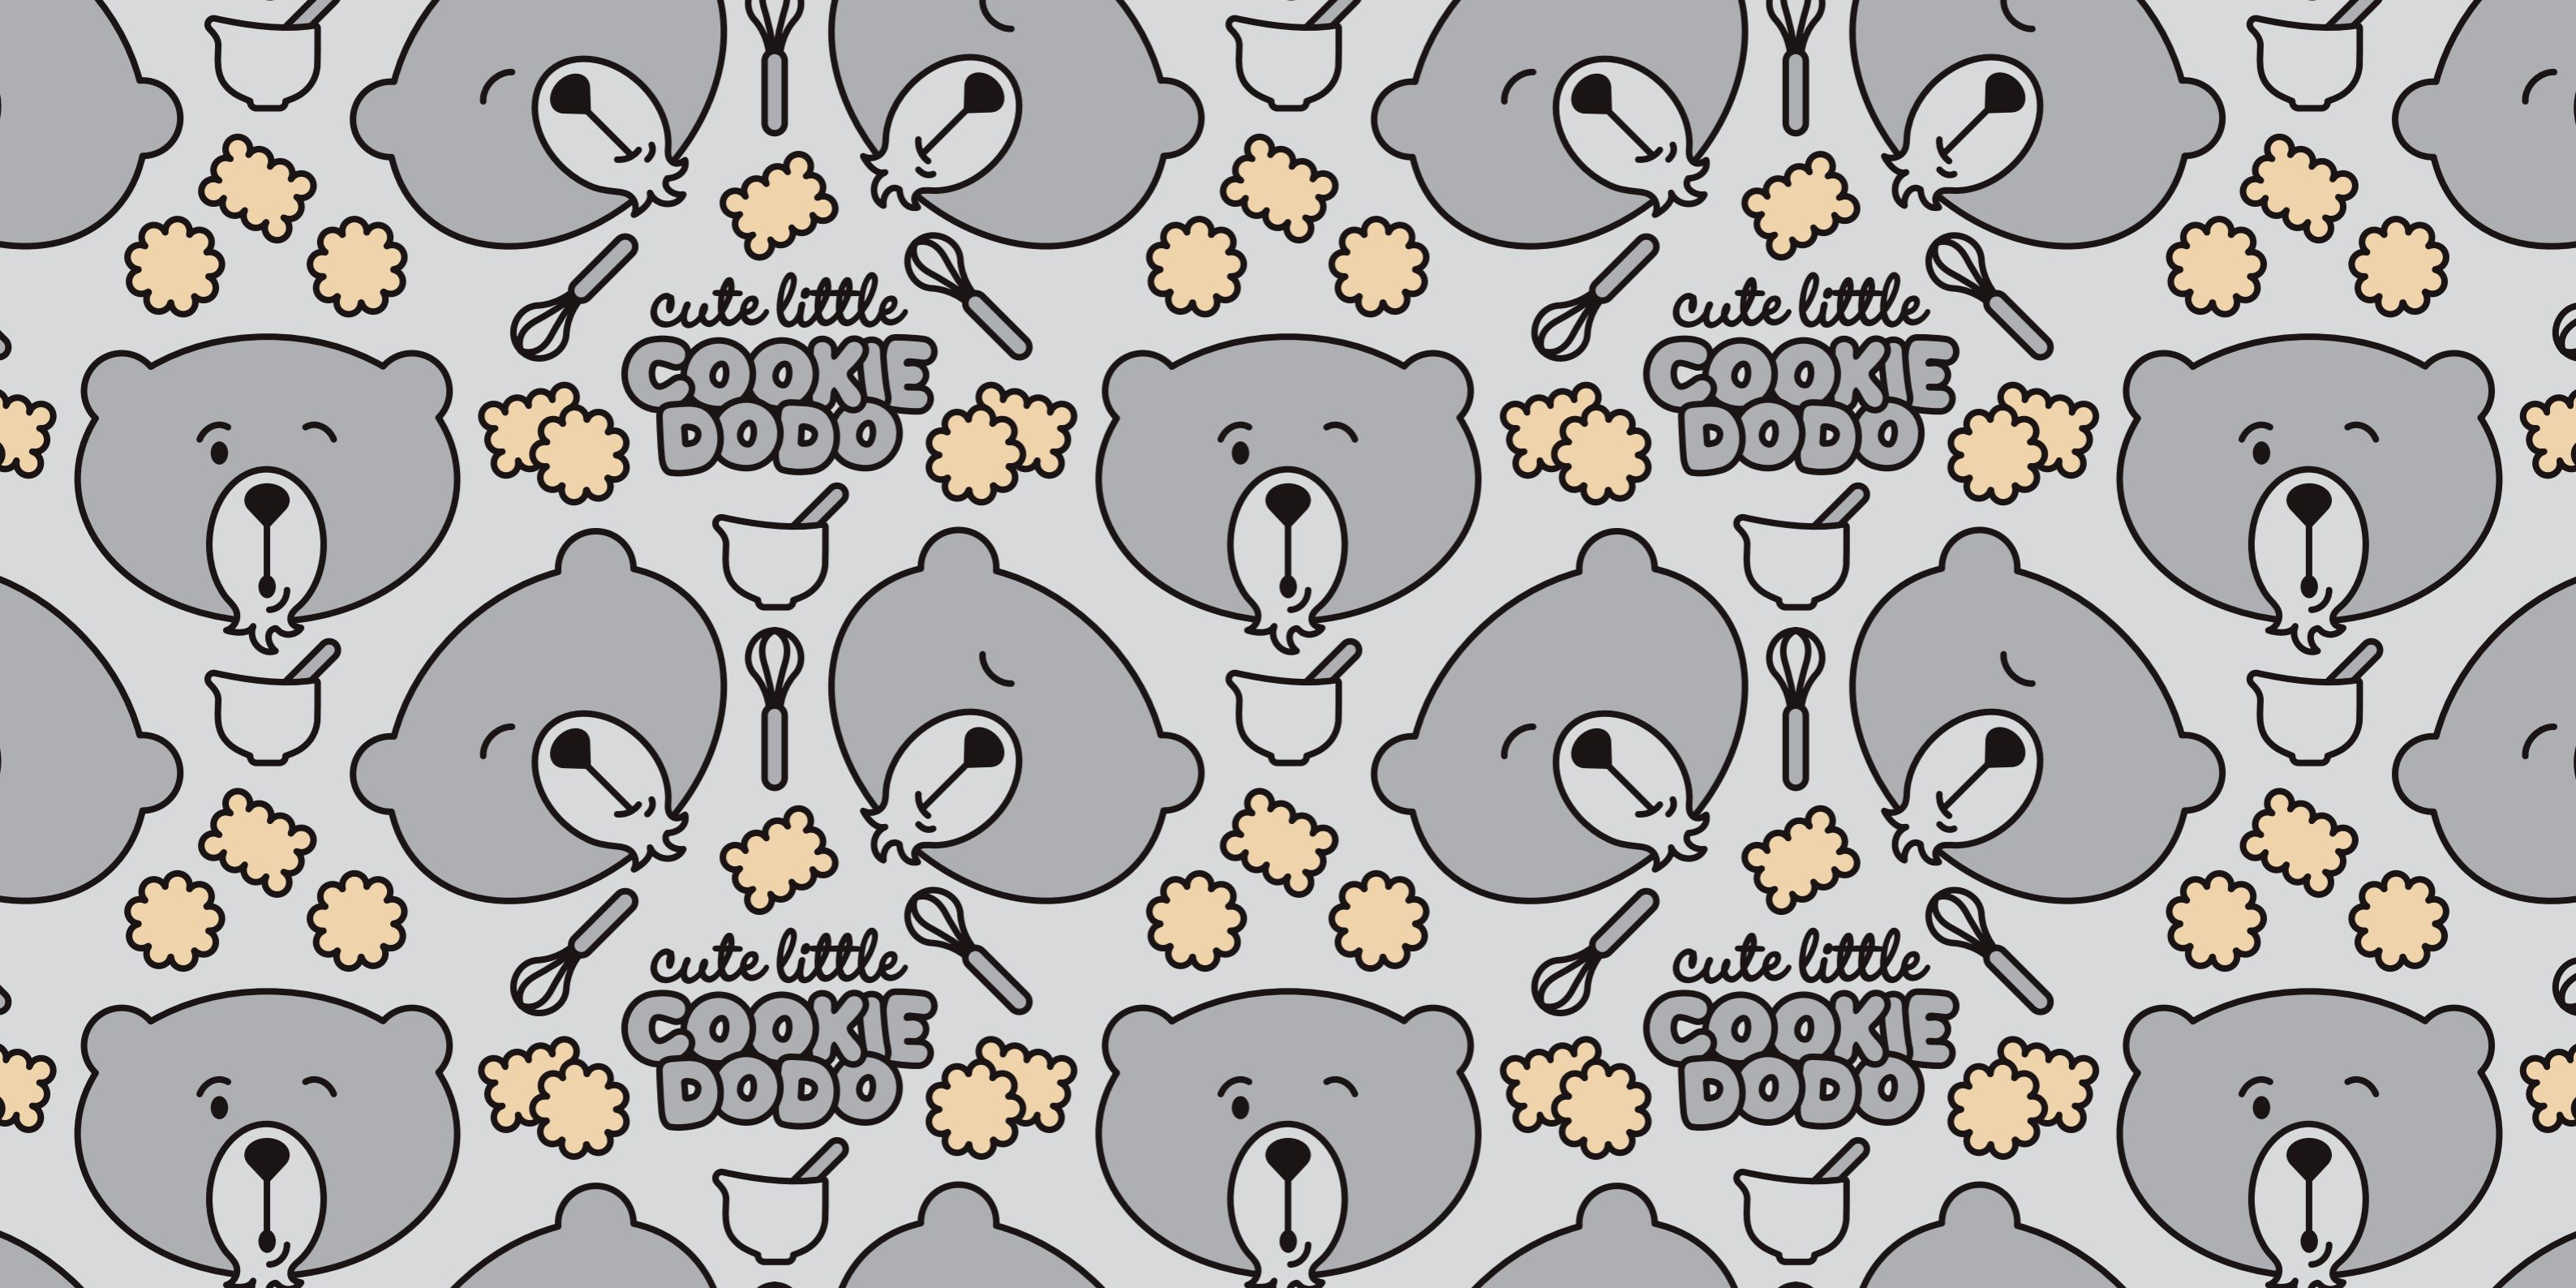

... with cute little Cookie Dodo,
their crummy friend.
